

This could have been YOUR PICTURE

when you were two months old

Two months after you began life at conception, you were already a well-proportioned, small-scale baby – with all the organs you would later have at birth.

Your brain was functioning. Your heart had been beating for a month. Your liver was making blood cells. Your stomach was producing digestive juices. Your hands would soon begin to grip, your feet begin their first gentle kicks. Your unique fingerprints were becoming engraved. And you needed care and protection.

Look again at the picture. Do you think you were anything but a human being when you looked like this?
